

Definition for Attenuation:

Stormwater attenuation is the control of water generated from impervious areas into creeks and rivers by diverting it in a pond for holding then allowing for the slow release of the water back into creeks and rivers or to percolate into the ground.