Lakeland Public Library Local Author Collection

The Lakeland Public Library wants to support local authors, so we have developed a Local Author Collection to help connect you with readers. If you are interested in having your work considered for the Collection, just fill out the submission form and return it, and a donated copy of your work, to the Lakeland Public Library, 100 Lake Morton Drive, Lakeland, FL, 33801.

Questions about the process? We've provided some answers:

Who is considered a Local Author?

A local author must live, or have spent a significant portion of their life, in Polk County Florida or a county immediately adjacent.

What happens after the Library receives my form and donated copy?

The material will be reviewed by a library staff member. If the book is accepted for the Local Author Collection, it will become library property and be processed accordingly with a spine label, barcode and property stamp. A short record will be added to the Library's database and the material will be shelved in a dedicated "Local Author" area, available for check-out.

If the material is not added to the collection, it will be donated to the Friends of the Library for their ongoing book sale.

What kinds of material would not be added?

There are some types of materials the Lakeland Public Library does not add to its collection: textbooks, specialized or highly technical non-fiction, or any material deemed unsuitable for the targeted age group.

Also, the following formats would not be added: any loose-leaf pages or workbooks.

Your work must be bound and, preferably, have an ISBN assigned to it.

You added my book two years ago, but now it's gone. What happened?

A library's collection is always changing. The Local Author Collection is no different. If your book was added and now it is no longer available it could have been damaged, or lost. Or it could have been withdrawn during routine collection maintenance. Titles that are damaged or lost are not automatically replaced.

Will you return my material to me if it is not added, or later withdraw from the collection?

No. Once you have submitted your material for consideration it becomes the Library's property.
